CIGARETTE IMPORTS

CIGARETTE IMPORTS

Disurbs German Manufacturers.

Vice-Consul James L. A. Burrell, of Magdeburg, reports that at the last general convention of representatives of the German elgarette industry, the increasing importations of foreign cigarettes were considered, in particular the danger of the continually increasing imports of Austrian Regie eigarettes for the German industry. He explains the situation thus:

On July 1, 1996, the duty on cigarettes was raised from 279 marks ($66.26) to 700 marks ($166.59), which increase, high though it was, lessened the importation of foreign cigarettes for a short time only. At present more than 60 per cent, of the imports are from Austria-Hungary, while ten years ago hardly any cigarettes were imported from those countries.

These cigarettes are not, as might be supposed, of the highest quality, but are principally of medium grade. Against this importation the increase in duty has had no effect whatever. The importations from England, which consist almost exclusively of the expensive varieties, have been steadily increasing for some years and have recently reached the volume of the importations from Russia. The market for cigarettes of German manufacturers are advocating a still higher duty on foreign cigarettes.
